Pharmaceuticals

The prevention of disease is one of the most important components to maintaining a healthy and productive flock. When disease does occur, treating it quickly with the right medication can help get those affected birds back on track. Our vast distribution network helps ensure that we have the product you need when you need it.

Insecticides

The development of resistance to insecticides due to repeated use of active ingredients belonging to the same mode of action (MOA) is a growing concern. An effective rotation strategy as a part of an integrated pest management approach alternates between different MOA groups, not just between products from the same MOA group. Our sales representatives will help you develop the right product rotation for your location.

Rodenticides

Rodenticides are a key tool in managing rodent problems, however, use of one product or active ingredient doesn't provide enough control. A single bait won't appeal to all rodents, leaving some populations untreated. Target populations become genetically resistant to repeatedly used active ingredients, making single products less effective over time.

Rotating through a series of rodenticides, each with a separate set of active ingredients, can prevent resistance. With each new product, rodents become exposed to different active ingredients and a wider range of bait flavors, textures and scents.
